

Culture and Religion are two concomitant elements:

Culture and religion are two concomitant things and can't be severed. that the nation which gives up its religion, so, that it is nation has given up its culture and civilization's heritage too that's why many peoples and nations, that accepted the Islam as an alternative religion than their original religion, have forgotten their ancient original cultures and clearer example for that is the Persian nation. we know well that original and ancient religion to Iran since oldest ages was the Zoroastrianism, but after Islamic invasion to Persia by Arabs, Persian people started accept invader Islamic culture and give up their genuine religion little by little and as time goes by, Persian people forgot the Zoroastrianism religion completely and became fight who remained believe it so when Iranians forgot their original religion, so, that they have forgotten their original culture and customs associated with that religion and nothing remained of that religion in order for Iranians to remember it than Norooz Christmas even this Christmas, so, that Islamists took on the task delude Iranians and the world telling them that Norooz is Islamic Christmas and not Zoroastrian occasion. The nations that give up their original religions are nations ready to accept any another invader culture than their original culture that's talk doesn't only apply to Iran and its Zoroastrianism, but is a general talk applies to all others religions and nations, but Iran was a clearer example for that fact I explained. Noticeably, most Iranians when they believe ideology, so, that they accept it and surrender to its ascendancy tremendously as they surrendered to Islam even some Arabs don't believe Islam and surrender it strongly as Iranians does although that religion is coming from them sometimes the cause for that fact may be resulted from that there is thirst for some peoples or nations to accepting others religions cultures belonging to others nations than their original religions.

west (Europe) kept adhered with his culture because it kept adhered with his Christianity religion hence, so most European peoples are convergent peoples in their customs and cultures in spite of differences of their nationalities and races because they inspire their culture from their Christianity religion so we can see that Christians throughout the world pride and boast their religion and they educate their sons on it even if they just were a minority living among large Islamic community. Christians realized completely that their religion is rather than any religion else to be favored or accepted relative to others religions that's why that they didn't accept cultural Islamic invasion in Islamic countries they live in. what notable about Christians throughout the world, that they inspire their customs and cultures from their Christianity even in most advanced countries such as United States and European countries, so their Christian peoples inspire their values and ideological and social culture from that religion in spite of the technology progress to that countries in many sciences such as (Engineering, Medicine, Space, etc) even that some daily practices to peoples of that countries are practices taken of inspiration or suggesting of Christianity religion's culture and its traditions.

Hence we can understand that what happened in Iran when its monarchy was fallen during Islamic riot events back in 1979 wasn't real revolution as Islamists figure it to Iranian people and the world as much as it is ancient conflict between two different cultures are Islamic culture represented by extremist Islamists and ancient Persian culture represented by 2500 years old monarchy and that revolution wasn't a case due to degrading of Iranian people living level or poverty state some Iranians suffered as Islamists tried to delude people with these lies what angered clerics and made them riot against his Imperial Majesty, King of Kings, Mohammed Reza Shah is because his Majesty took revive and prefer ancient Persia culture than invader Islamic culture through several important achievements his Majesty performed, such as emancipation woman to be made equal to man in all life fields and keeping up with urban, economical, health and social development available for advanced countries such as European countries and United States all these achievements Shah did at the time angered extremist Islamists and made them rebel against constitutional monarchy because those Islamists don't want predominate Iran's ancient culture than their invader Islamic culture. his Imperial majesty, Mohammed Reza Shah made great social and economical changes in Iran during his rule that made Iran one of most advanced countries in the world at the time, but these changes scared extremist Islamists being missed their individual interests and influence among Iranian community that's why which led to Khomeini to do his revolution against Shah.
